

Dad would dress in lots of different ways. Each outfit made him almost like a different person, depending on the look he went for

He was really friendly to people outside our family and quite different at home.

It was like he was two people - one for us and one for everyone else

